What Does It Mean to Be Ready for Work?

Original script and scene plan - 1 of 2

0:00 - You belong on the team

Welcome to Transition Town School. Today, Jordan is helping prepare classroom supply kits. Being ready for work does not mean knowing everything already. It means getting ready to learn and help. You can use pictures, spoken words, sign, or your communication device. Watch Jordan’s workday, notice helpful choices, and practice one small step at a time.

0:30 - Arrive when you are expected - Worksheet 1

Being on time means arriving when you are expected. Jordan’s school job begins at nine. Jordan checks the clock, gathers the work plan, and arrives a little before nine. The teacher can start the task with everyone present. If a delay happens, tell the teacher or supervisor as soon as you safely can. Planning and communicating are both useful work skills.

1:00 - Listen. Look. Check. - Worksheet 2

Follow directions by listening, looking, and checking what the job needs. The teacher says, put two pencils and one folder in each kit. Jordan points to the picture list and repeats the steps. You do not have to remember a long list by yourself. Ask for one step at a time or a picture checklist when that helps you succeed.

1:30 - Treat people with care - Worksheet 3

Kindness means treating people with care. Jordan greets a coworker and leaves enough space for them to work. A coworker drops a folder. Jordan asks, would you like help picking that up? Kindness can be a calm voice, a helpful action, or a respectful gesture. You can be kind without sharing private information or agreeing to something unsafe.

2:00 - Try a useful next step - Worksheet 4

Effort means trying a useful next step. Jordan’s first kit is missing a pencil. Jordan checks the picture list and adds the pencil. Effort does not mean rushing, hiding a mistake, or working through pain. You can take an approved break, ask for support, and try again. Learning a job takes practice, and small steps count as progress.

2:30 - See the whole example

Watch the example from the beginning. Jordan arrives at the agreed time, looks at the picture order, and places supplies in the kit. A coworker asks a question. Jordan stops, listens, and points to the checklist. When a pencil is missing, Jordan asks for another one. Notice that useful work includes communication, careful actions, and getting support when needed.

What Does It Mean to Be Ready for Work?

Original script and scene plan - 2 of 2

3:00 - Take care of your part - Worksheet 5

Responsibility means taking care of your part of the job. Jordan handles the supplies carefully and uses them for the assigned task. When a folder tears, Jordan tells the teacher instead of hiding it. Being responsible includes being honest about what happened. You can explain with words, pictures, a gesture, or supported communication. The team can help solve the problem.

3:30 - Keep the work area safe - Worksheet 6

Keep the work area safe. Jordan walks with the supply kit and keeps the walkway clear. If something spills, Jordan stops nearby and tells an adult. Do not touch unknown spills, sharp objects, or cleaning products without the right permission and instruction. Safety directions depend on the job. Ask your supervisor to show the safe way before trying an unfamiliar task.

4:00 - Help is part of working - Worksheet 7

Ask for help when a direction is unclear or a supply is missing. Jordan says, can you show me which folder to use? Asking a clear question helps the whole team. You can also point to a help card or use your communication device. You deserve instructions you can understand. Wait in a safe place if you need a supervisor to explain.

4:30 - Check before you finish - Worksheet 8

Check your work before saying the job is finished. Jordan compares the kit to the picture list: two pencils and one folder. Jordan points to each item, notices that everything matches, and tells the teacher the kit is ready. Checking can be a picture match, a count, or a supervisor’s review. Choose a checking method that works for you.

5:00 - Try it at your school

Now imagine your own school job. With a teacher’s permission, you could sort folders or prepare a small supply kit. Agree on a start time and look at a short picture checklist. Practice asking for help before you get stuck. A partner can model a step, and you can point to show the next step. The goal is useful practice, with the support you need.

5:30 - Your next step matters

Ready for work means showing up, following directions, being kind, trying a useful next step, and taking responsibility. You also practiced safety, asking for help, and checking your work. You do not have to do every part independently today. Choose one skill to practice next. When you are ready, try the review game and tell your teacher which school job you would like to try.

How to Be a Good Coworker

Original script and scene plan - 1 of 2

0:00 - A job is a team effort

Welcome back to the school workroom. Today, Jordan and Sam will prepare supply kits together. People on a team may have different strengths, communication styles, and support needs. A good coworker helps make the work area respectful and safe. Watch how these two coworkers share a task, ask questions, and solve a small disagreement without blaming each other.

0:30 - Know your team - Worksheet 1

A team is a group of people working toward a shared goal. Jordan checks the order cards while Sam gathers the supplies. Both jobs help teachers get the kits they need. You do not need to do everything yourself. Ask what your part will be, and notice how your part connects to someone else’s work.

1:00 - Show respect - Worksheet 2

Respect means treating another person as someone who matters. Listen when a coworker communicates, give them personal space, and use the name they ask you to use. Sam uses a communication device. Jordan waits while Sam finishes the message. Different ways of communicating deserve the same attention. Respect also includes saying no to unsafe or unkind behavior.

1:30 - Share the tools - Worksheet 3

Share approved tools and materials when the job calls for it. Jordan and Sam need the same folder bin. Jordan asks, may I use the bin after you? They agree to take turns. Sharing does not mean giving away your own belongings or using someone else’s equipment without permission. Check the work rules and ask the supervisor if you are unsure.

2:00 - Offer useful help - Worksheet 4

Help by asking before you act. Jordan notices Sam carrying several folders and asks, would you like me to carry some? Sam may say yes or no. Helping means respecting that answer. Do not grab someone’s materials or take over the whole task. A useful offer gives a coworker a choice and supports the shared job.

2:30 - Watch a shared task

Jordan checks the order while Sam counts supplies. They compare the picture card with the kit together. When Sam needs the pencil bin, Jordan moves it within reach after asking. Nobody rushes the other person. Notice that teamwork is made of small actions: knowing your part, waiting, asking before helping, and checking how your actions affect the team.

How to Be a Good Coworker

Original script and scene plan - 2 of 2

3:00 - Listen to understand - Worksheet 5

Listen to understand what your coworker means. Sam says there are not enough folders. Jordan stops packing, looks at the communication card, and checks the bin. Listening can include looking at a picture or reading a message. You may ask the person to repeat, slow down, or show you. You do not need to pretend you understood.

3:30 - Stay calm during a disagreement - Worksheet 6

Use a calm response when people disagree. Jordan and Sam both reach for the last folder. Jordan pauses and keeps hands to themself. A calm response might be a short break, a quiet sentence, or asking an adult to help. Feeling frustrated is allowed. Hurting, insulting, or threatening another person is not a safe way to solve a work problem.

4:00 - Agree on a fair next step - Worksheet 7

Agree on a fair next step with help when needed. Jordan says, we both need a folder. Can we check which order is first? The supervisor helps them use the order list and find more folders. You do not have to solve every disagreement alone. Describe the problem without name-calling and ask a trusted adult to support the conversation.

4:30 - Notice and thank - Worksheet 8

Thank a coworker for a helpful action. Jordan says, thank you for checking my kit. You can also sign thank you, use your device, or give an agreed gesture. A specific thank-you helps people know what was useful. You do not need to force a smile or physical contact to be polite. Respectful communication can look different for different people.

5:00 - Practice with a partner

Try a short partner job at school with staff permission. Decide who checks the picture order and who gathers supplies. Share an approved tool, offer help, and give each person time to communicate. If something is confusing, ask the supervisor together. Your teacher can model the first step and help you practice a respectful phrase or picture message.

5:30 - A team has room for you

Being a good coworker includes respect, sharing, helpful actions, listening, calm problem solving, fair agreements, and thanks. You can practice these skills with support. Think about one action that helped Jordan and Sam. Which action could you try with a partner? Use the review game to discuss your choice, then try your approved school task with a supervisor nearby.

Job Interview Basics

Original script and scene plan - 1 of 2

0:00 - An interview is a conversation

A job interview is a conversation about a job and how you could do it. Today, Jordan practices with a school supervisor. You may use speech, sign, pictures, notes, or a communication device. You can ask about communication supports ahead of time. There is no single perfect personality for an interview. Practice can help you know what to expect.

0:30 - Introduce yourself - Worksheet 1

Introduce yourself at the beginning of the conversation. Jordan says, hello, I am Jordan. Thank you for meeting with me. You might show an introduction card or use a device instead. Use a greeting that feels comfortable and respectful. Eye contact and handshakes are not the only ways to show attention. Ask your teacher to practice an introduction with you.

1:00 - Share your name clearly - Worksheet 2

Tell the interviewer your name in the way you communicate best. Jordan points to a name card while speaking. In school practice, use a pretend name if your teacher asks you to. You do not need to share private details such as a password, account number, or medical history to practice an introduction. Keep the conversation focused on the job.

1:30 - Choose a useful strength - Worksheet 3

A strength is something you do well or are learning to do well. Jordan says, I am careful when I sort supplies. Other strengths could include being helpful, learning routines, noticing details, or asking clear questions. Choose a strength that connects to the job. You do not have to claim that you can do everything without help.

2:00 - Give an example - Worksheet 4

Give an example that shows your strength in action. Jordan explains, I used a picture list to prepare three supply kits and checked each kit with my teacher. This tells the interviewer what Jordan actually did. You can talk about school, home, volunteering, or a practice job. It is okay to describe support you used while learning.

2:30 - Watch a practice answer

The supervisor asks, why would you be a good supply helper? Jordan pauses, looks at a note card, and answers: I like organizing. Last week, I sorted folders using picture labels. Notice the two parts: a useful strength and a real example. A short, honest answer is enough. You can prepare a card or a device message before the interview.

Job Interview Basics

Original script and scene plan - 2 of 2

3:00 - Listen to the question - Worksheet 5

Listen to the whole question before answering. The interviewer may speak, sign, or provide a written question. Give yourself time to understand it. Jordan waits for the question to finish, then looks at a reminder card. If you need more processing time, you can ask for a moment. You do not need to rush because someone else speaks quickly.

3:30 - Ask for help or clarification - Worksheet 6

Ask for help or clarification if a question is unclear. Jordan says, could you repeat that, or show me an example? This is useful communication. You may use a help card, gesture, or communication device. An interview is also a chance to learn what support the workplace can offer. Practice asking in a way that works for you.

4:00 - Ask a job question - Worksheet 7

A question from you can help you understand the job. Jordan asks, what tasks would I do first, and who would show me how? You could ask about the schedule, training, tools, or communication supports. Choose a question that helps you decide whether the job is a good fit. Your needs and interests matter in this conversation too.

4:30 - Thank the interviewer - Worksheet 8

Thank the interviewer at the end. Jordan says, thank you for explaining the job. You can sign, speak, or use your communication device. If you want to know the next step, ask how you will hear about it. A polite ending does not require physical contact. Afterward, reflect with a trusted adult on what felt clear and what you want to practice.

5:00 - Practice a short conversation

With your teacher, try a short pretend interview. Introduce yourself, name one strength, and give one example. Ask for clarification if you need it, then ask a question about the work. A partner can model an answer first. You may read a card, point to a picture, or use a device. Practice should help you feel prepared, not judged.

5:30 - Bring your own way of communicating

An interview is a two-way conversation. Your strengths, questions, and communication needs belong in it. You practiced an introduction, a strength, an example, listening, asking for help, asking a question, and giving thanks. Try the review game with unlimited retries. Then decide with your teacher which part of a real or practice interview you would like to work on next.

Good Choices at School and Work

Original script and scene plan - 1 of 2

0:00 - Choices help a workday go well

Everyone makes choices during a school or workday. Today, a supply helper notices a mistake and practices what to do next. Good choices help protect people, communicate needs, and complete a useful task. You can make a good choice after an earlier choice did not work. You can also ask a trusted adult to help you understand your options.

0:30 - Know the rules - Worksheet 1

Rules explain what is expected in a place or job. The school workroom asks helpers to walk, keep exits clear, and use only approved tools. Look for picture signs and listen to your supervisor. If two directions seem different, ask which one applies. A rule should be explained in a way you understand. Tell a trusted adult if something feels unsafe.

1:00 - Use respectful communication - Worksheet 2

Use respectful communication when you need something. Jordan says, I need another folder, please, or points to a supply card. A calm request helps the supervisor understand the need. You may need extra time or support to communicate. Respect also goes both ways: you deserve clear directions and a chance to ask questions without being mocked or rushed.

1:30 - Notice a mistake - Worksheet 3

A mistake means something did not match the goal or direction. Jordan accidentally puts one pencil in a kit that needs two. A mistake does not mean someone is a bad person or cannot learn the job. Stop and look at the order card. Notice what is different, and ask for support if you cannot find it yet.

2:00 - Fix what you safely can - Worksheet 4

Fix a mistake by following a safe correction plan. Jordan tells the teacher, checks the picture order, and adds the missing pencil. Some mistakes need a supervisor to handle them, especially if safety or someone else’s property is involved. Do not hide the problem. Ask before repairing something unfamiliar. Checking the result helps you learn for next time.

2:30 - Watch the repair plan

Watch the whole repair plan. Jordan stops packing when the kit looks different from the order. Jordan shows the teacher the card, adds the missing pencil with permission, and checks the kit again. The teacher explains the correction calmly. Notice that there is no need to blame another worker. The goal is to understand, correct the work, and move forward safely.

Good Choices at School and Work

Original script and scene plan - 2 of 2

3:00 - Return to your task - Worksheet 5

A task is the specific job you are working on. Jordan’s task is to fill supply kits, so the picture order stays on the table. If a noise or message interrupts, Jordan looks at the next unchecked step. A short checklist or organized work area can help. Ask for a quieter place or another support if the environment makes concentrating difficult.

3:30 - Use an approved break - Worksheet 6

A break is a planned pause from the task. You may need a break to rest, regulate, use the restroom, or get help. Follow your school or workplace process for requesting one. Jordan uses a break card and agrees with the supervisor where to wait and when to return. Asking for a needed break is a useful communication skill.

4:00 - Ask before an unexpected change - Worksheet 7

Ask your supervisor when something changes and you are not sure what to do. Jordan is told to deliver to a different classroom. Jordan points to the old route and asks for the new room picture. Guessing may send the supplies to the wrong place. A clear question or picture request can prevent confusion and help you continue.

4:30 - Take responsibility - Worksheet 8

Responsibility includes being honest about your work and communicating what is finished. Jordan tells the teacher that the kits are ready and one folder still needs replacing. This gives the teacher accurate information. Do not say a task is finished if you are unsure. You can point to a completed checklist and identify anything that still needs support.

5:00 - Try a pretend mistake safely

With staff permission, practice a small school task using a picture list. Your teacher can make a pretend mistake in a sample kit. Find the difference, tell the teacher, and follow the correction plan together. Avoid making an actual safety problem for practice. Use clean, approved materials and work in a space where you can get help.

5:30 - You can choose a next step

You practiced rules, respectful communication, noticing mistakes, correcting work, staying on task, using breaks, asking about changes, and responsibility. These skills improve with support and practice. Think of one helpful next step you could choose after a mistake. Try the review game, discuss your choices, and use a safe real-world classroom task to practice again.

Personal Appearance and Workplace Hygiene

30-minute lesson plan

Objective: Identify respectful personal-care routines, clean work clothing and job-specific safety requirements.

Minutes	Teaching activity
0-3	Preview the job skill with pictures. Invite supported responses.
3-12	Play the six-minute lesson. Pause at the eight worksheet answers and discuss examples.
12-18	Play the six-question review. Reveal, discuss, encourage and retry.
18-27	Practice an approved school task with a supervisor.
27-30	Reflect, record observed support, and select the next step.

Real-world practice

With staff guidance, use picture cards to plan clothing for an approved school job. Practice the school handwashing routine and identify who to ask privately if clothing or hygiene supplies are needed.

CDC and communication adaptations

Offer two picture choices, one direction at a time, an adult model and extra wait time. Accept pointing, eye gaze, sign, partner-assisted scanning, speech or a communication device. Do not require handwriting. Provide breaks and respect sensory needs.

Materials

Screen or projector, optional audio, standard or picture worksheet, approved classroom materials and a supervisor.

Personal Appearance and Workplace Hygiene

Original script and scene plan - 1 of 2

0:00 - Care routines support your work

Personal care is about comfort, health, safety, and the needs of a particular job. People have different bodies, cultures, hairstyles, budgets, and support needs. Nobody deserves teasing about appearance. Today, Jordan gets ready for a school lunchroom task. Watch how Jordan checks the clothing rules, practices handwashing, and asks privately for a needed supply.

0:30 - Start with clean work clothing - Worksheet 1

Choose clean clothing that fits the job’s safety directions. Clean does not mean expensive, new, or a particular fashion. Jordan selects a shirt suitable for the lunchroom task and checks that nothing loose will catch on equipment. If clothing is not available, ask a trusted adult privately for support. Access to supplies should be handled respectfully, without embarrassment or blame.

1:00 - Know when to wash hands - Worksheet 2

Wash hands at important times, including after using the restroom and before handling food. Jordan checks the lunchroom handwashing instructions before starting. Follow the supervisor’s directions for the specific task. Gloves do not replace the need to wash hands. If the sink is difficult to use or a product bothers your skin, ask staff for an appropriate support or alternative.

1:30 - Use soap and running water - Worksheet 3

Use soap and clean, running water for handwashing. Wet your hands, apply soap, and rub all surfaces. Remember the backs of hands, between fingers, and under nails. Jordan follows the picture sequence at the sink. Your school can show you an accessible way to use its equipment. Ask for assistance when needed, and use only products that staff approve for you.

2:00 - Give scrubbing enough time - Worksheet 4

Scrub your hands for at least twenty seconds, then rinse them under clean, running water and dry them with a clean towel or air dryer. A teacher can help you learn this routine without a competitive timer. Jordan uses a familiar short cue to remember the steps. Follow any additional workplace directions for food service or other specialized tasks.

2:30 - Watch the preparation routine

Jordan checks the task card, chooses suitable clothing, and goes to the sink before handling approved lunchroom supplies. At the sink, Jordan wets, soaps, scrubs, rinses, and dries hands. A teacher models a step when Jordan asks. Notice that this is a practiced routine, not a judgment about someone’s worth. People may need different supports to complete the same job safely.

Personal Appearance and Workplace Hygiene

Original script and scene plan - 2 of 2

3:00 - Dress for the job - Worksheet 5

Dress for the job by checking its specific requirements. An outdoor task may need weather-appropriate clothing. Some tasks require closed-toe shoes, a uniform, or protective equipment supplied or approved by the school or employer. Jordan asks the supervisor what is required. Do not guess about safety equipment. A different hairstyle, body type, or personal style does not by itself make someone unprofessional.

3:30 - Use a respectful grooming routine - Worksheet 6

Grooming means personal-care routines such as caring for hair and nails in ways that support comfort and task safety. Requirements vary by job and should be explained clearly. For some food tasks, hair must be secured according to staff instructions. Sensory needs and cultural practices matter. Ask a trusted adult privately about a routine or support; do not comment on a coworker’s body.

4:00 - Change or get support when needed - Worksheet 7

Change an item, or ask for help changing it, when clothing becomes unsuitable for the task. A spill may make a shirt wet or unsafe for continued work. Jordan stops and tells the supervisor privately. A replacement, a break, or a different task may be appropriate. You should not be teased for needing supplies or assistance. Follow the school’s safe plan.

4:30 - Ask privately for what you need - Worksheet 8

Ask for help when a personal-care supply or an accessible setup is missing. Jordan uses a message that says, I need to talk privately about a supply. The teacher responds discreetly and helps find an option. You do not need to share personal information with a whole class. A respectful workplace helps people meet requirements with appropriate supplies and support.

5:00 - Plan a school routine

With a trusted adult, use picture cards to choose clothing for one approved school task. Check the task’s safety requirements and locate the handwashing area. Practice the school routine with support as needed. You may point to pictures instead of describing personal details. Focus on what helps you feel comfortable and do the task safely, rather than judging other people’s appearance.

5:30 - Respect is part of readiness

You practiced clean work clothing, handwashing, enough scrubbing time, job-specific dress, respectful grooming, changing an unsuitable item, and asking for support. Personal care is a routine people learn with different kinds of help. It should be taught with dignity. Try the picture review, then tell a trusted adult which part of your school preparation routine you want to practice.

Following Directions and Completing a Job

Original script and scene plan - 1 of 2

0:00 - A clear plan helps

Today, Jordan prepares supply kits by following a short work plan. A clear plan tells you what to do, what you need, and how to know the task is finished. You may need spoken directions, pictures, a model, or a checklist. Asking for an accessible instruction is a useful work skill. Watch Jordan use the plan one step at a time.

0:30 - Listen before you start - Worksheet 1

Listen to the whole direction before starting when it is safe to wait. Jordan stops handling supplies while the teacher explains the order. If listening alone is hard, ask the teacher to show the step or provide a picture. People process information in different ways. You can use the communication and attention supports that help you understand the job.

1:00 - Check the instruction - Worksheet 2

Check the instruction by showing or repeating what you understand. Jordan points to the order card and says, two pencils and one folder. The teacher confirms the order. You can point, sign, speak, or use a device. Checking early can prevent confusion later. If the instruction is too long, ask for a shorter step or a picture list.

1:30 - Organize your materials - Worksheet 3

Organize materials before you begin the task. Jordan places pencils in one bin, folders in another, and the picture order within reach. A clear work area can make it easier to find the next item. Only gather approved materials. If a tool is unfamiliar or something looks unsafe, stop and ask the supervisor before using it.

2:00 - Use one step at a time - Worksheet 4

Follow the steps in the order the supervisor gives. Jordan first counts pencils, then adds a folder, then checks the kit. A picture checklist shows which step comes next. You can cover later steps or use a marker to show your place. Working in an order does not mean racing. Take the time and support you need to do the task safely.

2:30 - Watch the kit take shape

Watch the work plan in action. Jordan looks at the first picture, counts two pencils, and places them in the kit. Next, Jordan adds one folder. Finally, Jordan compares the packed kit with the picture order. Each action has a clear place in the sequence. The teacher can model a step or provide another cue if Jordan asks.

Following Directions and Completing a Job

Original script and scene plan - 2 of 2

3:00 - Finish the assigned task - Worksheet 5

Finish the assigned task before reporting it complete. Jordan prepares the number of kits requested by the teacher and keeps the completed ones together. If time runs out or a supply is missing, tell the supervisor what remains. You can ask whether to continue, pause, or change the task. An honest update is more useful than guessing that unfinished work is done.

3:30 - Ask for clarification - Worksheet 6

Clarification means getting a direction made clearer. Jordan is not sure which shelf holds the finished kits and asks, can you show me where these go? A picture, a demonstration, or a shorter sentence can help. You can request clarification with speech, sign, a help card, or a device. Asking protects both your learning and the quality of the work.

4:00 - Check the result - Worksheet 7

Compare the result with the original instruction. Jordan checks every kit against the picture order. If something is missing, Jordan asks how to correct it and checks again. The result might also need a count, a matching label, or a supervisor’s review. A checklist helps you notice what is finished and what still needs attention.

4:30 - Report what is done - Worksheet 8

Report the completed work to the supervisor. Jordan shows the checked kits and says, these three kits are ready. Jordan also explains that one extra folder was set aside because it was torn. A clear report tells someone what is finished and anything that still needs a decision. Your report can be spoken, pointed to on a checklist, or shared through a device.

5:00 - Practice a three-step school job

With staff permission, choose a small school job and a three-step picture plan. Gather the materials, complete the job, and check the result. Ask your supervisor to include a planned opportunity for clarification, such as choosing a shelf. You may use a partner’s model or other support. The goal is understanding the routine, not completing it quickly.

5:30 - A good plan includes support

You practiced listening, checking instructions, organizing materials, following steps, finishing, clarifying, checking results, and reporting. You can ask for directions in a form you understand. A good work plan includes the support you need. Try the review game, then practice your three-step school job with a teacher. Notice one step that became clearer and one step to practice again.
